Five Reasons Why You Should Write (Yes, You)

RAMESH NYBERG

It's no secret: Most of us cops hate to write. We hate it because we have to do it and the majority of us have little or no training – let alone interest – in the writing process.

This installment hopes to change your mind or, at the very least, present you with options which might benefit you in ways you never considered. If I come across as a bit biased on the subject, well, guilty as charged, your honor. I've been writing since I was nine years old and I just published my second book, Badge, Tie, and Gun – Life and Death Journeys of a Miami Detective. Not everyone has writing in their blood. I honestly don't know how it got there, but it's something which has just happened naturally for me. If it doesn't happen naturally for you, no worries, it is something you can learn, practice and get better at. Now, let's get on to the five reasons.

Reason #1 – You have stories to tell. Every one of us in the law enforcement profession does and there is a raging demand for police stories in every form of media. Just look at the top ten Netflix dramas and tick off the ones which have a police/crime theme. The last time I did this, it was seven out of ten. If the series or movie descriptions don't involve the word "murder," they likely say something about "police detective," "missing person" or something of a criminal nature. The same goes for books – whether fiction, nonfiction, full-length, or short stories, people love to read or watch things about crime, whether it's a true crime story about Mafia figures or a fictional series like Michael Connelly's Harry Bosch investigations. I should mention that Connelly was never a cop. You can tell stories as an insider. I can tell you from the reactions I'm getting that people devour police stories told with the voice of authenticity – your voice.

Reason #2 – Writing in this day and age is a lot easier than it was forty or so years ago. There used to be these things called typewriters and, when you made a mistake, you had to use correction tape or fluid (Wite-Out®). Even when the first word processor computers came along in the 1980s, you had to print everything out before the geniuses figured out how to create digital files and E-mail. Another technology plus are spell checker and grammar programs. These early AI creations allow the computer to walk you through your work and show you misspelled or duplicated words, capitalization and word usage errors, and grammar suggestions. It's like having a proofreading editor sitting next to you.

Reason #3 – You can make money writing. Notice I didn't say how much money, because that varies greatly on a number of factors. Those factors include what you are writing – magazine articles; books; poems; how-to guides; or a memoir about your time in law enforcement – who is buying it, and how much time and effort you spend marketing yourself and your work. If your primary goal is to make money, then you need to treat it like any other business. Note to user: Results vary. You could end up getting peanuts for a lot of hard work. There is no guarantee your work will be picked up and bought by anyone. You could – no, you will – get rejections from time to time. But, remember things like this: An author once sent his Navy-based thriller to several major publishers like Random House and they all rejected him, telling him there was no market for his work. He finally found a small publisher called Naval Institute Press which was willing to take a chance on him. The writer was Tom Clancy and the book was The Hunt for Red October.

Reason #4 – As a "side hustle" or extra income stream, writing has virtually zero overhead cost. All of us already possess either a desktop computer, a laptop, or both. All you need is time and fingertips to type. Hell, you don't even need those. You can even dictate using Microsoft® Word on your phone as you drive. You can write literally anywhere, at the time of your choosing, and you don't have to dress up or see anyone. When I work on this column, I'm usually on my sofa with my feet up, in my sweatpants. You already have all of the tools you need to start writing.

Reason #5 (and this is my favorite) – We cops go through experiences no one in any other profession or endeavor in life does. We have our own special brand of PTSD with stresses and emotional struggles. Writing is therapeutic. Writing down your experiences can ease stress and it can purge a lot of the internal challenges we grapple with on an ongoing basis. It's like having your own private therapist to talk to (and who doesn't charge you $150 an hour).

As I mentioned before, I started writing way before law enforcement was anywhere on my radar. Once I got into the job in 1979, I knew right away I would be writing about my experiences. I took down notes; I made copies of police reports and kept them at home; and, later, slowly started compiling them into what is now a published memoir. There is a second level to the "writing as therapy" idea – when someone tells you they read what you wrote and enjoyed it. Someone who read my book recently told me, "It was so interesting! I learned things about police work I never knew." That's a bonus paycheck.

Another thing you should know about writing is that there is a universe of resources out there to help you become a better writer. Editors and marketing gurus are all over YouTube with free, very useful information to assist new writers. Writing involves work. Serious writers – those who want to sell their work – know that good writing involves rewriting, honing, editing, and listening to the valuable advice of others who know the craft. No one sat down and wrote the great novel in one sitting.

When I first started, I had no idea whether I would ever see my work in print. I actually started with magazines – this one in fact. That was in 1998 and here we are 26 years and some 156 columns later (thank you, Al Menear!) still going strong. In 1986, I attended a writer's conference in Key West and got a chance to speak to an author named Carl Hiaasen. For those of you who don't recognize his name, he's a wonderful writer whose books are Florida-based. He has a love for the environment and a masterful sense of humor. (I strongly suggest Tourist Season and Double Whammy, Carl's first two novels; they are outstanding.) Carl signed a copy of Double Whammy for me and, in it, he wrote, "Keep writing – good things will happen. I am living proof."

I remember that advice whenever I feel tired or get tempted to do something else with my spare time. You have stories to tell, that we all know. We also know that there are audiences out there hungry for police-related stories. How do you start? Open up a new page on your laptop and just start telling them. If you decide to give writing a try, I'm always open to giving advice and guidance for anyone starting out – really, I'm happy to hear from you. Once you start, you're likely to run up against hurdles like time and energy. But, I'll tell you the same thing Carl told me, keep writing – good things will happen. P&SN

Ramesh Nyberg retired from law enforcement in November 2006 after 27 years of police work. He lives in Miami and teaches criminal justice at a local high school. He also teaches regional law enforcement courses through Training Force, USA. He enjoys getting feedback from readers and can be reached at ramesh.nyberg@gmail.com. Crime, Carnage and Coke – Badge, Tie, and Gun Has It All

New York Times best-selling author TJ English calls this new book, "the most absorbing cop memoir you will read this year – maybe ever."

Retired Homicide Detective Ramesh Nyberg vividly recounts his extraordinary upbringing in Miami, as the child of an Indian schoolteacher and a Swedish boatbuilder. Miami, to Nyberg, is not just a city, but a cherished sibling, as he intertwines gripping tales of murder and cocaine trafficking with poignant reflections on his childhood and the valuable life lessons gleaned from navigating the waters of South Florida.

Nyberg holds nothing back as he immerses readers in the grim reality of crime scenes and the brutal violence he encountered, while also offering insights into the ironic and often humorous aspects of law enforcement. His book brims with captivating narratives, detailing the bizarre and perilous pursuits of dangerous criminals, heart-rending encounters with grieving families, and gripping behind-the-scenes glimpses into suspects' confessions.

Interwoven with his professional experiences are frequent flashbacks to pivotal moments from Nyberg's youth which illuminate his later career as a law enforcement officer. Unlike any other police memoir, Nyberg's account is raw, candid and revealing, offering a stark portrayal of Miami during its tumultuous era of rampant cocaine trade and escalating crime, a time unlikely to be repeated.

While Badge, Tie, and Gun doesn't encompass every case or peculiar encounter from Nyberg's career (those would fill multiple volumes), he is considering the possibility of a second edition to include more stories. However, for now, Nyberg is excited to announce that more books are in the works. Stay tuned!

LEGAL UPDATE

Concealed Carry for Retired Law Enforcement Officers

LARRY E. HOLTZ, ESQ.

In Federal Law Enforcement Officers Association vs. Attorney General New Jersey (No. 22-2209; 2-14-2024), retired law enforcement officers from various agencies brought an action claiming that a federal statute, the Law Enforcement Officers Safety Act (LEOSA), 18 U.S.C. § 925C, gives them a federal right to carry concealed firearms anywhere in the United States, including their home state of New Jersey. The Third Circuit agreed, holding that "the federal statute does provide certain retired officers (those who meet all the statutory requirements) with an enforceable right, and that right extends equally to officers who retired from New Jersey agencies and those who retired from federal or out-of-state agencies. The federal statute also preempts contrary aspects of New Jersey law," N.J.S. 2C:39-6(l).

Accordingly, LEOSA confers an enforceable right upon Qualified Retired Law Enforcement Officers (QRLEOs) "who are carrying LEOSA-compliant identification to carry a concealed firearm (subject to subsection (b)'s exceptions). And LEOSA expressly preempts New Jersey law to the extent that it imposes additional conditions or restrictions upon such QRLEOs who are in possession of compliant identification." Subsection (b) provides, "This section shall not be construed to supersede or limit the laws of any state that – (1) permit private persons or entities to prohibit or restrict the possession of concealed firearms on their property; or (2) prohibit or restrict the possession of firearms on any state or local government property, installation, building, base, or park. 18 U.S.C. § 926C(b)."

Regarding the specific preemptions, the court declared that LEOSA preempts the following provisions of NJ law, as applied to QRLEOs who are carrying LEOSA-compliant identification:

(1) LEOSA's definition of "firearm," 18 U.S.C. § 926C(e)(1), preempts New Jersey law that bars the carrying of hollow point ammunition, N.J.S. 2C:39-3(f);

(2) LEOSA's definition of "qualified retired law enforcement officer," § 926C(c), preempts New Jersey law limiting an individual's ability to conceal-carry a firearm on the basis of age, state of residence, or jurisdiction of former law enforcement service, N.J.S. 2C:39-6(l); and

(3) LEOSA's definition of required identification, § 926C(d), preempts New Jersey law which requires individuals to obtain additional identification and/or more frequent firearms certification training before carrying a firearm, N.J.S. 2C:39-6(l).

The court also rejected the state's argument that construing LEOSA to preempt the state law will burden active law enforcement officers in the field. Said the court, "We understand and appreciate that concern. But, implementation challenges cannot override Congress's unmistakable intent to preempt contrary state law. And active law enforcement officers in New Jersey are already faced with determining whether retirees from federal or out-of-state law enforcement agencies are qualified to carry under LEOSA. … Determining LEOSA qualifications for retirees from New Jersey law enforcement agencies is unlikely to be more burdensome. … We may not ignore Congress's unambiguous conferral of an individual right or its clear intent to preempt state law. In LEOSA, Congress granted certain retired law enforcement officers a right to carry a concealed firearm. And, LEOSA expressly preempts contrary provisions of state law."

Genetec Security Center is a comprehensive public safety platform which allows for the full unification of video surveillance, access control, Automatic License Plate Recognition (ALPR), intercom management, intrusion panel integration, mobile cameras, and cloud storage. Through a modular approach, Security Center unifies live operations, incident response, investigations, and preventative system management, with a shift toward a continuous delivery approach. It also includes new mapping enhancements, configuration enhancements for authentication services, and automation features.

Law enforcement agencies worldwide use Security Center to monitor public spaces and manage security and operations for internal systems. It is also the technology foundation of Real-Time Crime Centers (RTCC) like those at the Mesa (AZ) PD; the New Orleans (LA) PD; the Chicago (IL) PD; and many others. In an RTCC, Security Center unifies data sources, Computer Aided Dispatch (CAD), video feeds, ALPR, gunshot detection, Automatic Vehicle Location (AVL), and Internet of Things (IoT) devices, and presents all of the information in an effective and user-friendly manner.

Identify Suspects by the Electronic Devices They Use

ELSAG® EOC Plus is a game changing electronic surveillance system designed to identify suspect people or vehicles, even when a license plate number is not known. EOC Plus is an enhancement to Leonardo's standard data management and analysis software.

This new system uses strategically placed sensors to collect electronic communication patterns and identities of consumer electronics, similar vehicle components, Bluetooth®, RFID tags, and Wi-Fi. As these electronic devices emit signals, sensors in the EOC Plus system capture their identifying or categorizing details to create an additional data set to enhance the records created by the LPR cameras. When an investigation begins, algorithms determine which specific mix of devices are predictably moving together. That specific mix of devices, communication patterns and plate number – linked by common time stamps – are designated an electronic fingerprint.

The EOC Plus system identifies the movements of electronic devices, individuals and vehicles, storing the data on its server for query and analysis to assist investigations. It maintains a commitment to privacy by refraining from decrypting or reading content from devices. Moreover, it enables law enforcement to identify specific vehicles within electronic signatures without relying on license plate numbers. Additionally, it uncovers signatures frequently associated with an individual or vehicle, potentially revealing convoys and travel patterns. EOC Plus demonstrates effectiveness even in off-road areas like subways and malls. Furthermore, it operates efficiently both with and without license plate readers at collection sites, ensuring broader coverage while managing deployment costs effectively.

NEW GUNS AND GEAR FOR 2024

P&SN Presents Its 33rd Annual Roundup Covering New Firearms and Equipment of Most Interest to Law Enforcement

The Shooting, Hunting and Outdoor Trade (SHOT) Show, sponsored by the NSSF, is an annual event where the firearms industry showcases and launches new products. This year's event was held in the Venetian Convention & Expo Center and Caesars Forum in Las Vegas, Nevada, and included 2,600 exhibitors and 13.9 miles of aisles to navigate. The 2024 show was the largest to date and attracted over 55,400 attendees.

For the last 20 years or so, there have been sections of the show dedicated to products of interest to the law enforcement professional. To say the least, the show itself can quickly put you in sensory overload and it's impossible to take it all in. What follows is a quick look at some standout products which would be of interest to the armed professional. Let's take a look at some new offerings which just might fit into your game plan.

CZ-USA

A real sleeper in the world of polymer frame, striker-fired pistols is the CZ P-10. The P-10 arrived on the scene a few years ago and has since evolved into full-size and subcompact versions. At the CZ exhibit, optics ready copies of the CZ P-10 were on hand for perusal which will further broaden the pistol's appeal.

What really caught my attention was the new CZ Shadow 2 Compact. Truth be told, I have never warmed up to traditional double-action pistols, but the Shadow 2 Compact may be the exception to the rule. I would categorize the double-action trigger pull as superb. The all-metal pistol features an accessory rail, a red fiber-optic front sight and is optics ready. Much like the iconic CZ 75, the Shadow 2 can be carried with the hammer down or cocked and locked with the manual safety engaged much like a 1911. Without question, the CZ 75 is a very classy pistol and has all of the features in demand by discriminating users.

The new CZ Shadow 2 Compact has a magazine capacity of 15 rounds.

FN America, LLC

A few years back, FN® introduced its line of 509® Series striker-fired pistols which has had great success. A number of agencies have selected the FN 509 as its duty pistol; most notably, the LAPD. This past summer, FN introduced the 509 MRD LE with sales restricted to law enforcement agencies. This variant on the 509 theme features a slightly longer four inch barrel and incorporates all of the in demand qualities which have made the 509 a top dog in the service pistol category.

The FN Reflex™ hit the market a short while ago and is indeed a slick package for discreet carry. This microcompact is very thin, yet boasts a generous magazine capacity of 11 or 15 rounds. But, the quality which really sets the Reflex apart from the other micros is its trigger action. Although it might look like a small striker-fired pistol, the Reflex is very different in that it is hammer-fired. The single-action trigger breaks with approximately five pounds of rearward pressure and is clearly best in the class. The Reflex is outfitted with a rail for those who choose to affix a small tactical illuminator.

The FN Reflex™ micro 9 subcompact is hammer-fired which sets it apart, as most others are striker-fired.

GLOCK®

The dominant force in law enforcement pistols continues to expand its line and new for this year are Gen5® upgrades for the GLOCK 29 10mm and the GLOCK 30 .45 ACP. These heavy hitters are now available with ambidextrous controls and GLOCK's Marksmen Barrel. The Marksmen Barrel features conventional rifling which allows the use of lower cost lead bullets. I was also pleased to see that the annoying finger grooves on the grip frame have been eliminated.

The new GLOCK® 49 features a shorter grip coupled with a longer slide and barrel.

GLOCK also announced a run of special makeup pistols through selected distributors. Most notable is the GLOCK 49 which features the abbreviated grip frame of the G19 with the longer slide and barrel of the G47. Those familiar with the GLOCK line will note that this is the exact opposite of the G19X/45 with the full-size grip frame and shorter slide. To my thinking, this combination makes a lot of sense, particularly for those who carry a concealed pistol in an inside the waistband holster. With pistols, the length and shape of the grip can compromise concealment. I wouldn't be at all surprised to see the G49 become a mainstream GLOCK offering.

Henry Repeating Arms

Most readers will probably associate Henry firearms with first-class lever-action rimfire and centerfire rifles. Over the last few years, Henry has broadened its horizons and introduced a double-action revolver, the Homesteader 9mm carbine, together with a few different law enforcement tribute rimfire rifles. For 2024, Henry will be introducing a truly innovative rifle which will command broad appeal.

The new Supreme rifle is an innovative lever-action model which accommodates AR-pattern magazines, combining traditional and modern technology.

The new Henry Supreme is a lever-action which can boast some very unique qualities. It does incorporate the lines of the classic American lever-action and it has the potential to take performance to an entirely new level. The Henry Supreme is a magazine fed lever-action equipped with a rotary bolt much like an AR pattern rifle. Those same magazines used in an AR-15 rifle also work in the Henry Supreme. The action is super smooth and, when combined with a match-grade trigger, the Supreme sets a new standard for lever-action rifles. Initial offerings will be in .223 Remington and .300 BLK.

Aimpoint®'s newest RDS is the ACRO® P-2™ which utilizes a larger battery than found in its previous model.

Improved Optics

Over the last few years, red dot optics moved from the exotic category to mainstream for domestic law enforcement. At the present time, every major manufacturer now offers pistols with an optics ready slide.

A few years back, Aimpoint® rocked the shooting world with the innovative ACRO® with a closed emitter. The advantage of the closed emitter is that it keeps the optic fully protected from the elements which can be a huge advantage for those who work in harsh environments. This year, Aimpoint is back with the ACRO P-2™ which features a 3.5 MOA red dot and boasts 50,000 hours of continuous runtime. Also new is the ACRO S-2™ 9 MOA which can be easily affixed to the rib of a shotgun.

Trijicon® remains the 800 pound gorilla in the red dot sweepstakes and it, too, had some new offerings. The Trijicon RMR® HD is now outfitted with a top loading battery which eliminates the need to remove the optic from the gun when replacing its power source. The user can select either the traditional dot or a complex reticle to suit his/her needs. Brightness can be manually set or automatic, again depending on user preference.

The new RCR™ is an enclosed emitter optic true to the Trijicon tradition of quality. Designed to handle hard knocks, the RCR has a wide optimum field of view and was designed with upgraded electronics and controls. Bolt pattern is identical to the RCR family which simplifies logistics when mounting it to the slide of a pistol.

Mossberg®

Mossberg did not disappoint and is now offering some new variants in its line of shotguns. I would submit that the role of the shotgun within law enforcement is changing and, in some areas, it has become the specialist's tool rather than a secondary weapon for patrol. But, there is no getting around the fact that, within their limited range, the shotgun is the most decisive tool in the armory.

Mossberg®'s Thunder Ranch 940® Pro was created with design input provided by Clint Smith and it comes optic-ready.

The super tough Mossberg 590® is widely utilized by law enforcement and the new variations should play very well. New this year is the 590S in an optics ready format. I especially liked the stock which the end user can add or remove inserts to in order to achieve the correct length of pull. As one who has conducted an awful lot of shotgun training over the years, I can tell you that a poorly fit stock is the biggest handicap in comfort and performance with the shotgun. Another winner is the 590S with Magpul furniture and a Holosun optic.

The Mossberg 940® has gone on to be Mossberg's flagship autoloading shotgun and is widely used for action shooting competition, hunting and law enforcement applications. New this year are a few new spins including the Thunder Ranch 940 Pro optic ready model and the 940 Pro optic ready shotguns with FDE and OD green metal surfaces.

Olympus Arms, Inc.

One of the more unique firearms of the recent SHOT Show was the Vulcan Rifle from Olympus Arms. Chambered for the .308 Winchester, the Vulcan resembles an AR pattern rifle, but with a very big difference. Unlike the Stoner pattern rifle which is gas-operated, the Vulcan is recoil-operated. Olympus describes it as a long recoil, multicaliber recoilless rifle which can be configured in a variety of different ways.

The Vulcan has been described by many as a "recoilless" rifle.

Skeptic that I am, I had to question the "no recoil" claim. However, a buddy of mine shot the Vulcan at the Industry Day at the Range™ shoot and reported that recoil was more like a rimfire rather than a full power centerfire cartridge. This was further supported by a video of the Vulcan being shot off a bench where I noted no rearward movement.

The Vulcan has ambidextrous controls and will be available in different chamberings in the future. I'm not quite sure how they repealed the law of physics, but Olympus is onto something here. For tactical operations, a semi-auto, recoilless rifle like the Vulcan can certainly fill a niche.

The new Rapid Force Duty Holster (V3) includes an optional Axon® Signal Sidearm Mount which ensures reliable body-worn camera activation upon unholstering.

Rapid Force Duty Holster and Photon™

Alien Gear Holsters displayed an improved version of its Rapid Force Duty Holster. This holster can be configured several different ways and can be had in either Level 2 or Level 3 retention. The draw stroke is intuitive and fast, an elusive quality in some other designs.

The Rapid Force Holster is available in both light bearing and non-light bearing configurations. It will also accommodate most red dot optics. For duty use, most officers would prefer the locking belt slide variant with the QDS (Quick Detachable System). Swivel Drop Leg options are available for SWAT operations.

A few months back, Alien Gear introduced the Photon concealment holster. The Photon is an ambidextrous design which can be configured for either OWB or IWB carry and offerings are available for both light bearing and non-light bearing pistols. To date, the Photon has proven to be the perfect companion for my Springfield Armory® Hellcat® OSP™ complete with a Streamlight® TLR-7® sub illuminator.

Rock River Arms, Inc.

Precision rifles with long-range capabilities have been a hot ticket in recent years and Rock River Arms recently introduced a contender with the XM24. Available in .308 Winchester and .338 Lapua Magnum, the XM24 is outfitted with a 26 inch stainless steel nitride and cryo-treated barrel, an oversize bolt handle and a non-folding MDT ESS chassis stock. For threats in the distance, the XM24 is more than capable of a decisive resolution.

Rock River Arms AR-15-style rifles are widely used by law enforcement agencies, including the DEA. Several months ago, the company introduced a quartet of Operator DMR (Designated Marksman Rifles) rifles including two in .223/5.56 NATO and two in .308/7.62 NATO. Copies are available with both 16 and 20 inch barrels with features which enable the user to be far more effective in dealing with threats in the distance. In a very crowded field, these offerings from Rock River Arms are clearly a cut above the ordinary.

Safariland®

It's no secret that Safariland is the dominant force in police duty holsters and it continues to raise the bar on performance. However, its line of concealment holsters for plainclothes operatives and off duty wear also excels. The Safariland SOLIS™ is a holster optimized for small pistols which is both red dot and compact light compatible. The SOLIS is an outside the waistband, open top rig which utilizes the innovative Safariland ALS® (Automatic Locking System) security measure. The ALS allows for an intuitive fast draw by swiping the thumb release as you acquire a shooting grip. Crafted from SafariSeven™, the SOLIS can handle hard knocks and the worst the elements have to offer.

Safariland is also a leader in the development of soft body armor and the new APEX® Concealable Body Armor Vest certainly warrants a hard look. Unlike traditional vests, the APEX features a zip-up front for easy on and off and this design eliminates the need for VELCRO® and elastic straps. The four piece carrier design integrates two side panels with their front and rear counterparts which ensures unparalleled articulation, allowing the armor to protect the body when twisting or turning. The floating front and rear panels overlap the side panels providing continuous protection no matter how you move. Not only is protection enhanced, but comfort is as well.

Scouts Anyone?

Many years ago, Colonel Jeff Cooper popularized the concept of a short, relatively lightweight bolt-action rifle which he dubbed the scout rifle and could fill a variety of roles. Might such a rifle fill a niche for the law enforcement professional? There may indeed be applications when a military sporter or heavy precision rifle may not be the best choice and a scout would be just the ticket. Such a rifle could certainly fill a role for officers who work off the beaten path and may have to euthanize large animals, as well as give them capabilities to defend themselves against threats in the distance.

The Franchi Momentum All-Terrain Elite is a relatively new entry to the market and looks every bit like a winner. Available in .223 Remington and .308 Winchester, the Momentum Elite is loaded with desirable qualities like a sleek modular stock, flip-up sights, a free float Picatinny rail, and an 18 inch barrel with a muzzle brake. Other frills include M-LOK and QD sling attachment points and the rifle ships with a detachable ten round Magpul magazine.

Savage® Arms had its improved 110 Scout on hand and it, too, showed a lot of potential. I liked the AccuFit Stock which allows the user to adjust both length of pull and comb height. Savage's adjustable AccuTrigger™ can be user set for a clean, crisp break. The barrel on the Savage Scout measures 16½ inches in length, complete with a muzzle break and a forward mounted Picatinny rail. The Savage Scout is available in .223 Remington, .308 Winchester and .450 Bushmaster. A ten shot detachable magazine completes the package.

Smith & Wesson®

Smith & Wesson has been very busy over the last year and had a number of new products to showcase. Although not intended for the law enforcement market, its new 1854 lever-action rifle caught everybody by surprise. However, two offerings which may appeal include the FPC® and Response™ 9mm carbines.

The Response™ positions its safety, bolt release and charging handles in locations which are familiar to AR-15 users.

The FPC was introduced midyear, but this was my first opportunity to look it over. This novel design folds to just a shade over 16 inches and lends itself to environments where a longer shoulder weapon just doesn't make the cut. The FPC utilizes M&P® pistol magazines and ships with one 17 round stick and two with a capacity of 23 rounds. Spare magazines are stored in the stock.

The FPC is optics ready and M-LOK slots accept accessories such as lights or laser aimers. I had the chance to shoot the FPC at the Las Vegas Metro Police Department (LVMPD) range the day before the show and came away impressed. A Smith & Wesson rep reported that the FPC has attracted quite a bit of interest from police agencies.

Yet another spin on a pistol caliber carbine is the Response. With lines similar to an AR-15, the 9mm Response is a blowback rather than gas-operated firearm. The FLEXMAG™ feature of the Response allows the user to run either M&P double stack magazines or GLOCK 17/19 magazines which will no doubt broaden its appeal to the police market.

Springfield Armory

This year, Springfield Armory has introduced new colors, as well as 18 and 20 inch barrel lengths, for the highly acclaimed Hellion™ rifle. With the standard 16 inch barrel and 28.25 inches in total length, the bullpup Hellion is ideal for working in confined spaces where a traditional shoulder weapon would prove awkward.

Springfield Armory has also expanded and enhanced its extensive line of 1911 pistols. The workhorse Garrison now includes variants with a 4.25 inch barrel length in 9mm and .45ACP. To my thinking, the Commander length 1911 with a 4.25 inch barrel is the best for discreet carry.

Currently, the Echelon™ is solely offered as a full-sized service pistol; however, I expect various sizes and chambering options to become available in the near future.

For several years, the flagship pistol in the Springfield line has been the TRP™ (Tactical Response Pistol). When the FBI was looking for the perfect pistol for the elite Hostage Rescue Team, they went with the Springfield Armory Professional. The TRP is a semi-custom variant of that design and has been further refined for 2024. Standard features include VZ Hydra™ grips for a positive hold, tritium three dot sights, top slide serrations, and an accessory rail for mounting lights and lasers. I was particularly impressed by the Carry Contour model with the bobbed grip frame.

The Springfield Armory Echelon™ pistol arrived on the scene in mid-2023 and has already made a huge impact. Just when you think that polymer frame, striker-fired pistols have reached their apex, somebody builds a better mousetrap. Right now, the Echelon is right at the top of that mountain.

Externally, the Echelon resembles the Hellcat on steroids, but there is much more to the picture. Most notable is the Central Operating Group and removable trigger system. The Echelon is modular in nature and the Central Operating Group can be switched from one grip module to another. Three different size group modules are available along with three different backstraps to ensure proper fit to the hand. The one quality I found most desirable is that, by removing the slide cover, over 30 different types of red dot optics can be fitted without a plate. That is a huge advantage. Right now, the Echelon is only available as a full-size service pistol, but I would anticipate different sizes and chambering to be available in the near future.

What's coming up in the near future for Springfield Armory? A totally blacked out Emissary in 4.25" and 5" models (in both 9mm and .45) should be available by the time you read this issue of P&SN.

Springfield will also be introducing their SA16-A2 (a retro-style M16A2). Basically, this is a recreation of the classic A2, but with SA markings and some internal upgrades for performance and function (including an Accu-Tite™ system, M4 cut feed ramps and a funneled Magwell). This should be released in a few months and should be somewhere in the $1,200 to $1,300 range.P&SN

The fully blacked out Emissary 4.25" in 9mm features a Cerakote® finish which combines with custom 1911-style features and enhancements.

NRA Announces New Law Enforcement Grant Program to Support Range Development

The National Rifle Association is pleased to announce its cooperative support for range development and law enforcement training through the new NRA Law Enforcement Range Fund. This program was established as a matching grant program to encourage city, county, state or federal agencies to work with the NRA on efforts to build and improve law enforcement ranges across the United States.

"The NRA is committed to 'Backing the Blue' and this is another example of the NRA fulfilling that commitment," said Glen Hoyer, the Director of NRA's Law Enforcement Division.

Eligible public law enforcement agencies can apply to this program to build new law enforcement ranges or for maintenance, security and upgrades of existing law enforcement firearms training ranges at the city, county, state, or federal level.

"NRA Range Services is excited to partner with the Law Enforcement Division to expand our efforts in supporting range development across the country," said Liz Bush, Managing Director of NRA Community Engagement. "This new grant program reaffirms NRA's commitment to providing more opportunities for comprehensive firearms training under safe and responsible conditions."

Law enforcement firearms ranges which are, or will be, utilized by multiple law enforcement agencies will be given greater consideration. Additionally, the law enforcement firearms ranges which allow civilian use, under the agencies' oversight, for such things as civilian concealed carry training or general use by civilians, is also preferential.

For more information on this program and other available range grants, please visit the Range Services Web site at rangeservices.nra.org/funding-grants or E-mail at range@nrahq.org.

Nearly six million members strong, the NRA continues its mission to uphold Second Amendment rights and is the leader in firearms education and training for law abiding gun owners, law enforcement and the military. For more information, visit the NRA's Web site at nra.org

THE ELSAG® EOC PLUS IDS SUSPECTS BY THEIR ELECTRONIC DEVICES
Mobile phones, fitness trackers, etc., provide intel
The EOC Plus helps law enforcement identify suspects and persons of interest by creating digital fingerprints from sets of electronic devices that routinely travel together. Common time stamps from EOC Plus and LPR reads link digital fingerprints with specific vehicles. This evidence is vital to critical missions such as finding missing persons, combatting trafficking, and aiding Homeland Security. Find out how to start your EOC Plus program today.

Improving Learning Outcomes in Police Academy Training

IMPROVING LEARNING OUTCOMES IN POLICE ACADEMY TRAINING

Published by the US Department of Justice's (DOJ) Office of Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS Office) and the International Association of Directors of Law Enforcement Standards and Training (IADLEST), this report describes the results of the Academy Innovations project, a COPS Office supported initiative aimed at studying ways to improve the methodology for delivering basic police training content. Recruits' ability to learn and retain material presented during and after basic police academy training is a genuine concern for academy directors, police administrators, recruits, officers, and the community. Since much information is delivered relatively quickly, police training professionals must understand and employ instructional delivery methodologies which help recruits learn and retain information. Led by IADLEST, the project conducted a randomized controlled trial in five US police academies to determine whether students who participated in an in-person or online integrated curriculum performed better than those who participated in a traditional in-person or online lecture. The report briefly reviews the literature on integrated curricula and retention intervals, discusses implications for the field, and provides eight best practices to guide the implementation of integrated curriculum elements in the police academy.

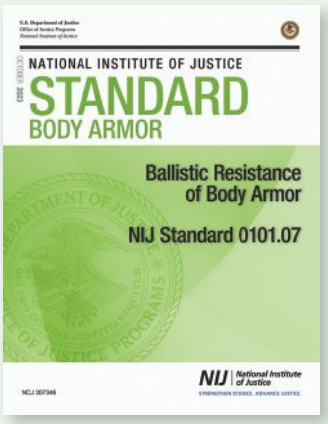
UPDATED STANDARD FOR BALLISTIC RESISTANCE OF BODY ARMOR



The National Institute of Justice (NIJ) has issued an updated standard for ballistic-resistant body armor – NIJ Standard 0101.07 – tailored to the needs of law enforcement and other criminal justice agencies.

Key updates include improved test methods for armor designed for women; more rigorous testing of soft armor panels; revised testing of hard armor plates, including curved plates; and references to ten standardized test methods, laboratory practices and terminology guides.

Law enforcement agencies should expect to see body armor certified to the updated standard in late 2024 or early 2025.

Officers should continue wearing their NIJ certified vests. Given the large number of ballistic-resistant vests currently worn by officers, NIJ anticipates maintaining armor certified under the former standard (0101.06) on the Compliant Products List (http://tinyurl.com/4sxwckut) through at least the end of calendar year 2027.

A full copy of the report can be read at http://tinyurl.com/35d27xpj

OVERCOMING LANGUAGE BARRIERS IN POLICING

The "Overcoming Language Barriers in Policing and Building an Effective Language Access Program" includes resources and tools developed by the US Department of Justice's Law Enforcement Language Access Initiative (LELAI) which can assist local and state law enforcement agencies in their efforts to provide meaningful language access to individuals with limited English proficiency within their jurisdiction.

An initiative led by the Civil Rights Division's Federal Coordination and Compliance Section in partnership with US Attorneys' offices, the resources review the legal obligation to provide language assistance services and offer promising practices for overcoming language barriers which can impact officer safety, public safety and the integrity of an investigation and prosecution.

Specifically, the language access resources include the following:

- Roadblocks to Communication Recorded Virtual Training Event which discusses the legal obligation to provide meaningful access to individuals with limited English proficiency; identifies and troubleshoots common translation and interpretation issues; and describes the appropriate use of tools and resources such as bilingual officers and machine translation.
- LEP.gov Web Resources for Law Enforcement Officers provides sample language access plans, policies and forms; examples of language access settlement agreements; and other resources to help law enforcement draft, revise or adopt language access policies, plans and procedures.
- LEP Resource Guide for Law Enforcement which includes guidance on strategies for law enforcement agencies to ensure language access, resources for obtaining language services and possible funding sources for law enforcement agencies.
- FBI Advice of Rights Forms Translated in 40+ Languages, often referred to as the Miranda warning, is used by law enforcement to apprise subjects of their constitutional rights in various types of law enforcement interactions, including arrests and custodial interrogations. The form has been translated by FBI linguists into over 40 languages.
- Letter to Law Enforcement from the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights which describes a law enforcement agency's federal civil rights obligations to provide language assistance services to individuals with limited English proficiency.

OPERATIONALIZING PROACTIVE COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT: A Framework for Police Organizations

Published by the Office of the Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS), this guide is intended to present police leaders with a framework for institutionalizing community engagement strategies to improve their personnel's willingness to increase proactive, positive interactions with the community. It draws on the discussions from law enforcement focus groups at every rank, from 14 police departments, sheriffs' offices and state police organizations, synthesizing the results into three themes: (1) defining expectations for proactive community engagement; (2) engaging leaders in proactive community engagement; and (3) establishing proactive community engagement accountability. To illustrate how these concepts can be applied, the final section presents how a specific proactive community engagement strategy – community walks – can be holistically implemented in a neighborhood experiencing high victimization.

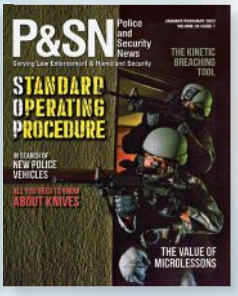
40 YEARS 1984-2024

P&SN Welcomes Its 40th Year



Police and Security News made its debut in late 1984, released alongside its two sister publications – Firefighter's News and Rescue News. First published by Brewer Communications, Inc. from its offices in Barnegat, NJ, the inaugural edition included feature articles covering such topics as video surveillance, administering first aid, effective personnel utilization, X-ray equipment and technology, as well as new products available to the law enforcement community.

P&SN has adopted a number of format upgrades over the past four decades, including a shift from tabloid size to a standard magazine size configuration, as well as a number of logo redesigns.

Publisher Al Menear commented, "It's truly remarkable to witness the sustained growth of a magazine brand in this industry for 40 years. Reflecting on the individuals and companies which have influenced the law enforcement sector during this time has been a gratifying experience."

Pictured here is Volume 1 Number 1 which was published quarterly beginning in the winter of 1984-85. Featured on the cover is a three-wheeled motorcycle from Trident Motors, sold by Havis-Shields Equipment Corp. (now Havis).

Included in the advertising found in this first issue: a multitude of law enforcement related products, including Tear Drop Emergency Light (halogen with magnetic mounting) – $41.00; Universal Car Lockout Tools – $22.95 per set; Basket Weave Leather Duty Belt – $28.99; Streamlight® SL 15 Flashlight (15,000 candlepower) – $60.00; Reflective Vest with 3M™ Thinsulate™ – $20.00; GORE-TEX Windbreaker Jacket – $50.00; Code 3 Ranger III Lightbar (with Quartz Halogen Bulbs) – $395.00; Under Dash Mobile Telephones (VHF/UHF/Telco) – $1395.00 (antenna and installation equipment included); TEKNA® 7.5" Survival Knife – $52.95; Cruiser-Mate® Storage Clipboard (Saunders Mfg.) – $22.00; Non-PC Law Enforcement T-shirts (You Have the Right to Remain Silent Forever, Beware The Pig, Reach out and Touch Someone) – $6.50; and much more.

CONSIDERATIONS FOR SPECIALIZED UNITS: A Guide for State and Local Law Enforcement Agencies to Ensure Appropriateness, Effectiveness, and Accountability

Throughout 2023, the Office of Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) and the National Policing Institute (NPI) convened a series of meetings to discuss specialized units in state, local, tribal, and territorial law enforcement agencies and create guidance for those agencies' leadership to consider when forming, managing and disbanding such units. This report includes sections on identifying the need for a specialized unit; selecting the unit's membership and leadership; managing the unit; establishing its policies, procedures, and end date; holding the unit and its members accountable; and working with community members when they have feedback on the specialized unit's operations.

REAL STORIES OF GENUINE ABSURDITY

JAMES L. MCCLINTON, PH.D.

A trio of armed and masked criminals in Commerce City, Colorado, recently robbed a check-cashing service. Unfortunately, the armed robbery went awry when the three pathetic perpetrators emerged from the scene of the crime with cash in hand, only to discover that someone had stolen their getaway car while they were inside robbing the business. Interestingly, police suspect their getaway car "may have already been stolen" from someone else. No one was injured during the crime and, after a foot chase, officers managed to catch and arrest two of the three suspects. ("No fair! We stole it first!")

Does that include when women whistle at men?... In Great Britain, men who wolf whistle or make sexual remarks to women may face prosecution for street harassment even if they believe it is a compliment or a joke, under pending legislation. The new bill will make it an offense to cause "intentional harassment, alarm or distress" to a person in public based on their sex. This means anyone who catcalls, wolf whistles or makes a pass or sexual comment towards a woman which a "reasonable" person would feel amounts to harassment will no longer be able to claim it was meant as a compliment or joke. Police will be given guidance so they can enforce the law. (I was once catcalled by a woman. I gave her the name of a qualified ophthalmologist.)

Honk if you dislike this court ruling… A California appeals court judge has ruled that "expressive honking" isn't protected as free speech. A woman who was cited for honking numerous times at a protest claimed that "expressive horn use" was her First Amendment right. California appeals court judges disagreed. In a majority opinion, judges for the US 9th Circuit Appeals Court ruled in favor of the state which said that honking a car horn is prohibited "except when reasonably necessary to warn of a safety hazard." The female driver had driven past a group of demonstrators and honked her horn 14 times. A San Diego County Sheriff's deputy pulled her over and cited her for misuse of a vehicle horn. She filed a lawsuit to try to block the state from enforcing the statute. (Hey, nobody likes a "honky.")

Hey, sweetie, on a scale of one to ten, you're a nine and I'm the one you need… A woman accused of trying to smuggle two illegal immigrants into the US employed an interesting, but unsuccessful, tactic in trying to avoid arrest – flirting. A Texas DPS trooper's body camera captured a video of a stopped vehicle in Jim Hogg County. After speaking with the driver, troopers suspected she was smuggling two women. When asked if the driver's licenses presented were legitimate, she told the trooper that she did not know. While running the licenses, she told the trooper, "I'm looking at your eyes, sir. I'm looking at your eyes because you're pretty handsome." The woman later admitted that she picked up the women at a stash house and was attempting to drive them through the Falfurrias Border Patrol Checkpoint. (That trick only works in adult movies.)

And, the COs were all wearing WELCOME BACK shirts… Investigators from the Pinellas County, FL, Sheriff's Office working a burglary case responded to a tip and detained a man. When they confronted him, the man refused to cooperate with deputies, including providing his identity. "He was told he would be charged with obstruction and he continued to refuse, stating, 'call my lawyer,'" the arresting officer reported. After he was fingerprinted, he was identified as a 46-year-old man from Clearwater and booked into jail on the obstruction charge. Deputies noted he was wearing a T-shirt which read, "I Just Got Out of Prison." Close enough: a cross-check found he was released in March. (The shirt probably said "Kick Me" on the back.)

What a way to celebrate GLOCKtober. I can't wait for "April Showers bring SIG SAUERs"… An orthodontist in Raleigh, North Carolina, had a catchy new promotion going, "Grins and GLOCK®s." Yep, you read that right – patients who sign up for Invisalign® braces can choose between a free GLOCK 19 or a membership to Youngsville Gun Club & Range. The deal is open only to those 21 and older and the club will conduct a background check on recipients. The Doc has received mixed reactions to this special offer; notably, Align Technology, which makes Invisalign, isn't happy, "This promotion does not reflect our brand purpose." (If you go for the veneers, he'll give you an AR-15...)

What ya gonna do when the forklift operator comes for you… Workers at Arlington Auto Wrecking in Akron, Ohio, had had enough of a 26-year-old man who had broken into the facility three times. In the most recent incident, the man broke into an SUV sitting on the lot, but before he could drive away, a forklift driver quickly went straight for the SUV and hoisted the vehicle about 20 feet off the ground with the man inside. When they explained the situation to the 911 operator, they said, "Wonderful, that is the greatest thing I've ever heard." After officers arrived at the scene, the employee lowered the SUV to the ground and the intruder was handcuffed. (An uplifting story – that employee should get a raise.)
